“Let Him Know (話佢知)” partner notification service of 21171069.com

The Department of Health has launched a revamped Gay Men HIV Information Website 21171069.com in mid September 2015. Newly added is a partner notification service “Let Him Know (話佢知)” that allows users infected with HIV or other sexually transmitted infections to send anonymous emails to his previous partners. Users are given options to show his own email and add in his personal message, which may increase the chance of the receivers to take the email seriously and go for a sexual health checkup. No personal information such as email address and IP address will be stored in the server; but essential statistics such as number of visitors and number of emails sent will be recorded.

This service has drawn reference from overseas experience in Australia, Netherlands, USA and Canada, which showed that similar services were well accepted by users and cost-effective. Misuse was only reported at an extremely low rate.
